

Drafting Service Agreements: Second Edition

FOREWORD

FIDIC has developed model forms for two types of associations between services suppliers - this Model Joint Venture Agreement and a Model Sub-Consultancy Agreement.

These two model forms of agreement are compatible with the 2017 4th edition of FIDIC's "Client/Consultant Model Services Agreement" (the White Book). FIDIC intends to publish Guides on the use of all of these Agreements.

This Model Joint Venture Agreement will allow the parties to agree, on a project specific basis, their obligations, services and rewards within the Joint Venture created among them by the effect of this Model Joint Venture Agreement. It is not intended to create a legal entity or to be used to create a more permanent non-project specific legal association.

The Joint Venture's action, capacities and internal decision making processes have been clearly structured.

One purpose of a model agreement such as this is to raise the awareness of the Members of the Joint Venture as to what should be in the Agreement to mitigate their individual risks and avoid disputes between themselves.

A second purpose is to provide the Members with a manageable agreement which establishes clear responsibilities and legal capacities to act. It is aimed to avoid disputes and deadlocks between the Members.

In countries where it is inappropriate to use the description "Joint Venture" for the type of project specific association described above, the wording in the Joint Venture Agreement can be changed accordingly.

It must be remembered that it is the Joint Venture Members as the Joint Venture that will be contracting with the Client and therefore it is the Joint Venture Members together as the Joint Venture that will be the "Consultant" as defined in the "Client/Consultant Model Services Agreement" (the White Book), or any other form of Services Agreement.

Where for any reason it is not suitable for any of the potential Members to be in a direct contractual relationship with the Client, then the use of the Sub-Consultancy Agreement should be considered.

Users should check on a case by case basis the precise nature of this Agreement in light of the governing law, assuming that the lowest level of alliance is intended. This Model Joint Venture Agreement does not create a legal entity but is an agreement between parties to associate for a specific project.

In the event of doubt, it is recommended that legal advice should be obtained.

The obligations under a main Services Agreement with the Client, e.g. "Client/Consultant Model Services Agreement" (the White Book) will be borne by the Joint Venture. It is for the individual Members to agree the allocation among themselves of these same obligations and liabilities within the Joint Venture, notwithstanding the fact that towards the Client each Member will typically be jointly and severally liable for the
